BIBLIOGRAPHY OF RUSSIAN AND SOVIET LITERATURE ON THE HISTORY OF MAY DAY

Foreword

The present bibliography represents a list of materials devoted to May Day — the festival of international solidarity of the working class-published in the Russian language. The materials contained here have been found in seven largest book-depositories of the Soviet Union (Library of the Marxism-Leninism Institute of the Cpsu Central Committee, Library of the Academy of Social Sciences of the Central Committee and the State Lenin Library in Moscow, the State Public Library named after M.E. Saltykov-Schedrin in Leningrad, the State Public Historical Library and the book-depository of the Institute of scientific information on social sciences of the Ussr Academy of Sciences in Moscow and the Library of the Ussr Academy of Sciences in Leningrad). The bibliography spans over the period from 1886 to 1986, and contains works devoted to the history of May Day celebration both in this country and in other countries of the world.

Such a broad selection — both in the chronological scope and in bibliographical content — has its peculiarities. All previous bibliographies on the subject of May Day were usually brief because they were intended, as a rule, for mass readers, thus being oriented at proposing recommendations for reading. In contrast to them the proposed bibliography is a scientific reference-book intended for scholars specializing in history and contemporary international working-class movement, in particular for those who are interested in such a colourful and impressive phenomenon as May Day, which continues to play an important role in society. The authors think it important to provide a brief information for the benefit of foreign colleagues on the main principles of selection and classification of materials which constitute the basis of the following list and determine its content and structure.

1. Due to the limited space proposed by the Brodolini Foundation, the list is necessarily selective. It contains predominantly monographies, collections of articles, brochures, and to a lesser extent individual articles. Preference was given to material of historico-narrative, theoretico-analytical rather than propagandist character (such as addresses, papers devoted to May Day rallies etc.).

The selective character of the list is also expresssed in the fact that materials from current periodicals were included only partially. It concerns in particular newspaper articles, reports on current events, letters etc. Magazine publications though not exhaustive, are given far greater prominence.

Since it was agreed not to overburden the list with all kinds of didactic materials (brochures and articles containing directions for lecturers, organisers of May Day school celebrations, concerts etc.), they are absent from the bibliography.

The list contains texts published during the period of approximately 100 years in this country as well as those appearing before the October Revolution of 1917 in Russian publications abroad (for instance, in the journals of the Marxist group «Emancipation of Labour», in the Bolshevik newspaper Iskra, printed abroad, etc.).

2. The structure of the bibliography is based on two principles — historical and genre-typological.

This has dictated singling out five sections: works by V.I. Lenin, documents, Russian and Soviet literature on May Day, and memoirs.

3. As far as the order of presentation of bibliographical notes and their content is concerned, every item under each section and heading is presented according to the name of the author and the headline in the Russian alphabet. For convenience of the readers headlines given in Russian are also translated in English. The materials are listed mostly in accordance with original publications; this is accompanied, though, by the mentioning of their later reprints (for instance, in the collections of works by an author).

The bibliography was compiled by researchers of the Institute for International Labour Studies of the Ussr Academy of Sciences: E.G. Popova (editor), N.A. Anzelevich, E.V. Arsentieva, L.V. Gorshkova. Editor-in-Chief and author of the foreword was professor M.A. Zaborov, head of the Section of historiography, Doctor of historical sciences.
